Citing journal articles in APA Style when no DOI is available.

APA Style indicates that when no DOI is available for an online article, you should provide the URL of the journal home page.

How to locate the ‘journal home page’ using the Library catalogue:

Sample reference:

Step 1
Enter the Journal Title into Search (http://www.lib.monash.edu.au/search/). It is best to use quotation marks.

Step 2
At the search results page, use the “Journals” Limit to limit your search results if necessary. Otherwise, click the “View Online” link below the record for the journal.

Step 3
Click the appropriate link to access the full text.

Step 4
The page that opens is the journal home page (see example below). The journal home page will provide a list of current and past issues of the journal. Copy the URL for this page.
Your reference in APA Style would look like this:

How to locate the ‘journal home page’ using Google:

Sample reference

Step 1

Search for the journal title in Google. It is best to use quotation marks.

"E-Journal of Applied Psychology"

Step 2

The home page will be identifiable because it will be an access point for current and past issues of the journal. Copy the URL.

E-Journal of Applied Psychology

Welcome to the peer-reviewed E-Journal of Applied Psychology. Academics will find E-JAP a great resource for both publishing and

Your reference in APA Style would look like this: