What does the Originality Report mean?

Assignments submitted to Turnitin generate an Originality Report. This report is the result of comparison between the text in the assignment and a range of sources including web pages, journals and assignments previously submitted to Turnitin. Any matching or highly similar text discovered is highlighted in the Originality Report.

Similarity does not necessarily mean that you have plagiarised. The Originality Report shows that your assignment contains phrases or sentences that appear in another work. To avoid appearing to have plagiarised, you need to check whether the highlighted sections in your paper are directly copied from a source or contains poorly paraphrased sentences.

Quoting correctly: If the highlighted text is a direct quote from the original source, enclose it with quotation marks and include a correctly formatted reference. In some referencing formats, additional information should also be provided with direct quotations, such as page or paragraph numbers from the original source. More information about referencing formats can be found on the Citing and Referencing Library Guide.
Paraphrasing correctly: Paraphrasing appropriately means presenting ideas in your own words and your own sentence structure, while still including an appropriate reference. An example of poor paraphrasing is to copy sentences from the source and include them in your paper with superficial changes, such as replacing some words in the sentence with synonyms. This can lead to unintentional plagiarism, as replacing words does not make something original. Instead you should focus on the idea presented in the source and present that idea in your own words and sentence structure in your writing, remembering to include a reference to the source.

Note: If you use assistive technologies and have difficulty using Turnitin or accessing your similarity report, please contact your lecturer or Disability Services.